Republicans should not forget to prepare a bill providing for a sinking fund to pay off the indebtedness of Hawaii.

If San Francisco's chief of police be allowed out on bail, the question naturally arises, how many of his force should be in jail.

This is the evening to postpone action upon the resignation of A. G. M. Robertson, chairman of the Republican Central Committee.

Hawaii's importance as an American shipping center should rank next to the big Atlantic ports. It would not take us long to excel New Orleans and San Francisco if we made the effort.

Since the Azoreans arrived in Hawaii on Portugal's Restoration Day, which they regard as one of good fortune, it is to be hoped that good fortune will be with them in the island home which they have selected for the years to come.

It is rather significant when a Japanese legation, outside of the United States, finds it necessary to issue a statement that war with America is unlikely. This may almost be taken as an indication that Japan is making rapid preparations for such a contingency.

The use of electric current for the transmission of power has been one of the most notable features of the development of machinery in manufactures. The first census to show electric power was that of 1890, when 15,569 horsepower was reported. Last year it had increased to 1,138,298 horsepower.

Perhaps the difficulty with Japan may be settled by the subjects of the Mikado coming to the conclusion that they do not wish their children to be educated with American children, when they read of mobs burning tobacco buildings, destroying snuff factories, lynching colored men and practicing such eccentricities as are unknown in Japan.

The Governor's financial budget for the Legislature will evidently be more satisfactory, next February, than was his first exhibit, as the Executive suggests an appropriation for city improvement and promotion work. The latter would no doubt be spent to better purpose than a former sum of twenty thousand dollars, which was hustled out of the country to advertise our snowy peaks.

An eastern prophet has foretold wholesale destruction in four nations within the next two years. There are twenty-five American cities on the doomed list, but San Francisco is omitted, probably owing to its recent troubles. New York will simply be swallowed, says the aged astronomer, who also predicts that the earth's axis will no longer be on a slant. We suggest that the prognosticator must have been on a skate.

Last year the value of the manufactures of the United States aggregated fifteen billions of dollars. This is at the rate of $135 per capita of our population, or one-third of the average annual wages of the men, women and children who made the goods. Our exports of manufactures amounted to only $603,000,000, which is less than half of what is consumed by only twenty countries and groups of islands bordering upon the Pacific Ocean. This does not take into consideration the value of manufactures we shipped to Europe, Africa, Western Asia and Eastern American countries, and it shows there is yet ample room for the extension of our Trans-Pacific trade.

A FREE PORT.

When Governor Carter, at the meeting of the Promotion Committee on Saturday, referred to the advisability of making Honolulu a free port for the purpose of increasing our Trans-Pacific trade, he undoubtedly meant that we should undertake the establishment of a large bonded warehouse system. In no other way can this become a free port, for the tariff laws of the United States are as applicable here as on the mainland, and all goods entering here for commercial purposes must pay the regular rates of duty. But the port can be made free, to all practical intents and purposes, by the erection of warehouses in which goods from any part of the world may be stored, under the seal of the United States, to be removed therefrom only upon the payment of the Federal and warehouse charges which, together with the delivery cost to and from ship's side, would be practically nominal upon large consignments. In this way the manufacturers of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and all other large industrial centers could have their goods ready for delivery in Japan, China and Australia within a couple of weeks after they received their orders. To a certain extent this might interfere with the business of British merchants as conducted in Hongkong, but what we wish to see established here is a business that will benefit Hawaii. That it can be successfully done there is no doubt if capital will engage in the enterprise, and the capital need not be entirely local.

The future prosperity of this Territory will not be so largely dependent upon sugar as it has been in the past, especially with the enforcement of the present administration policy of land settlement and Americanization. It is well, therefore, to be prepared with an auxiliary, if not a substitute, and this can be found by devoting our energies to the utilization of the natural gift of localization that God has given to Hawaii.

HAWAIIAN PATENTS.

Captain Macaulay brought to public attention a subject that is of importance to many people on these islands, when seeking information as to the rights accorded him under the laws of Hawaii before the date of our annexation to the United States. He, with many other of our citizens, patented his inventions, but at the present time it is extremely doubtful whether he has any protection at law. His inventions may have been infringed or duplicated. Others may be enjoying the fruits of his labor and skill under the Federal laws of the United States while he, an American citizen, has unintentionally been deprived of his rights. Of course, at the time of annexation Hawaiian patents should have been recorded in Washington with their plans and models. Apparently this was never done, through an oversight. But that is small satisfaction to Captain Macaulay and other inventors here. As far as the Organic Act is concerned there seems to have been no provision for, or reference to, patents, excepting as to the abolishment of the Hawaiian patent office. Now that public attention has been drawn to the matter, there is no doubt that the Executive and the Delegate will use every endeavor to have the wrong righted, and we believe that Congress will not hesitate to accord to Hawaiian inventors that long-delayed protection, under Federal law, which should have been accorded to them eight years ago and which is theirs by right.

OUR NEW IMMIGRANTS.

While congratulating Hawaii upon the arrival here of the new workers and settlers who came to us last week it should be remembered that their advent was the result of a large expenditure of money on the part of those interested in the sugar industry, with a very considerable risk attachment. Of course the planters expect a return for their investment and it is but reasonable that they should receive it. That is the business end.

But it must be remembered that these new immigrants, brought here free of all expense to themselves, are in no way compelled to work on the plantations. This point was forcibly brought out, a few weeks ago, by Governor Carter. These families are as free to go their own way as are the immigrants who land by the thousands every day in New York and other Atlantic cities. But they must show that they will not become a public charge if they decide to remain in Honolulu or seek employment elsewhere than in the cane fields. This is the only safeguard afforded to the sugar planters for their original outlay.

There is one more point that should not be overlooked, and that is the disposition on the part of the planters to offer land enough for a home, free of all incumbency, to those Azoreans who remain with and work with them for a stated period. Some plantations are unable to do this because their own occupation is subject to lease. But when we consider that only a few years have elapsed since contract labor was available here from all sources, this remarkable change in methods must certainly be regarded as a recognition, by the plantation interests, of the wishes and intentions of the administration at Washington. And it has been brought about solely through the persistent work of our Board of Immigration.

DISTRIBUTING THE NEW IMMIGRANTS

Many Have Friends Here And Want To Go To Them

ONE MARRIAGE SINCE THE PORTUGUESE LANDED

GILMAN EXPRESSES HIMSELF AS VERY WELL SATISFIED WITH THE APPEARANCE OF THE STRANGERS

The work of distributing the Portuguese immigrants is going on as rapidly as possible and it will not be long until they are all out of the receiving station and at work on the various plantations throughout the islands or settled in Honolulu and the other towns as some of them express their intention of doing. The work of examining the immigrants was concluded about 10:30 last night, all of them being passed with the exception of a few who are still held in quarantine on account of having the measles, or having been exposed to the disease. The distribution of the families is proving a vexatious problem. Those in charge of the work are anxious to make as fair a distribution as possible. There have been applications from the various plantations for families far in excess of the number that can be supplied. J. A. Gilman wishes to supply them in fair ratio, but this premise is a difficult matter, on account of the fact that a large proportion of the immigrants wish to go to some particular place. Many of them, says Mr. Gilman, have in their pockets papers on which is written the name of some plantation where they have friends and to which they wish to go. The majority of them show an inclination to go to work on plantations on the railroad.

There are in all 251 families among the immigrants, besides the single men. Thirty families are listed to go to Ewa plantation and 25 families to Waialua. From 15 to 25 single men will also go to the latter plantation. According to statements made by officers of the Suveric, she brought 50 stowaways from the Azores. Most of these were men who had no passports and stowed away to escape military service, they being bound to serve a term in the army according to the law of their country.

Commissioner Sargent when asked about the matter this morning, stated that he had no knowledge of it, that he had heard nothing of there being any stowaways. He said that every person who was landed from the ship was manifested. It is stated that the passports of the immigrants are not with the ship. Mr. Sargent says that he will look up the matter of the stowaways at once.

It is learned that the figures previously published of the number of deaths aboard the Suveric during the voyage are incorrect. The ship's officers state that there were 21 deaths, all of children under three years of age and most of them under one year. There have been two deaths since the passengers were landed. One child died yesterday and another early this morning. There have also been three births since the Suveric arrived. One child was born immediately after the steamer docked and another soon after the passengers came ashore. A third child was born this morning. That was all up to noon today.

There was a marriage among the immigrants this morning. Manuel Machado and Maria Umbelina came to the conclusion that they might as well start their new life in Hawaii together, and this morning they went up to the Portuguese church and were made husband and wife.

Back of the marriage lies a story
